

About the Foundation

The IFCCH was established to be the first non-governmental institution for conservation of culture heritage in Egypt.

The foundation has a unique board of Egyptian and international consultants to provide the best, most knowledgeable professional services and most recent, cutting edge scientific advice for conservators, restorers, researchers, foreign missions and students.

Objectives of the institution:

The International Foundation for Conservation of Cultural Heritage aims to be a forum for conservators and related professionals and all over the world to share experiences thoughts and ideas through achieving the following objectives :

- Assistance in solving problems related to conservation of monuments through the provision of technical consultancy by a group of experts in this field.

- Attention to cultural exchange and to open channels of communication, formal and informal, between Egyptian conservators and conservation experts all over the world.

- Organizing local and international conferences.

- Carrying out specialized and advanced conservation training programs.

- Creation of a database of Egyptian conservators and international conservators who have work experience in Egypt with CV's in Arabic and English to share with international institutions, universities and archaeological foreign missions.

- Helping Egyptian young researchers to prepare proposals for master's and doctoral research and other services related to postgraduate studies.

- Helping Egyptian conservators to Publish their work through IFCCH website and magazine in English and Arabic.

- To develop business cooperation protocols between the foundation and foreign missions operating in Egypt to leverage the expertise of Egyptians and international conservators on a larger scale.

So missions announce job opportunities available for Egyptian conservators or international conservators with work experience in Egypt then through the database on the website 5 applicants of required qualifications will be nominated for interviews.

Activities and Services

The IFCCH offers specialized conservation training courses for international and Egyptian conservators in Egypt, including conferences, scientific symposia, workshops and seminars, including classroom and field components, online training courses, professional translation and interpretation from English to Arabic and vice versa, announcement of employment opportunities for Egyptian conservators and international conservators with good work experience in Egypt with foreign missions, providing advisory services in conservation of culture heritage, specialized computer courses about computer skills used in conservation such as 3D, AUTOCAD, PHOTOSHOP, FILE MAKER PRO, ACCESS and other databases and documentation programs, advanced courses on creating models of archaeological objects, especially ship models in original scale, developing cultural exchange programs with some international universities, institutions and museums, facilitate access to scholarships in the institutes and research centers international members, a digital library divided according to the disciplines of conservation and archaeology, including both English and Arabic publications, publishing scientific research of Egyptian and international conservators in both English and Arabic which will be judged by the Advisory Committee for Scientific Research.

In addition to special services for foreign missions working in conservation of Egyptian antiquities such as providing conservation materials and supplies, Testing and analysis of their samples locally in Egypt and professional translating services. The foundation also accept private collections, art work and furniture to be restored by a staff of skilled conservators.

www.ifcch.com

International Foundation
For Conservation of Culture Heritage

المؤسسة الدولية لصيانة التراث الثقافي

Mob : 01211921102 – 01211163785
info@ifcch.com